

Call for Nominations for PPAC Physician Awards for 2014

Deadline Date: 15 April 2014

The Physicians Professional Advisory Committee (PPAC) to the Surgeon General of the U.S. Public Health Service (USPHS) is seeking nominations for five physician awards. These awards will be presented at the USPHS Scientific and Training Symposium (formerly the USPHS Professional Conference) in Raleigh, North Carolina. The awards will honor either Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) civil service employees or physicians of the Commissioned Corps of the U.S. Public Health Service (Corps).

Listed below are descriptions and evaluation criteria for each of the three awards.

Clinical Physician of the Year

This award will recognize a clinical physician who consistently achieves high standards in the practice of medicine. He/she is able to find innovative ways of delivering quality medical care despite the constraints of budget and personnel. This individual is consistently looked upon as a role model by his/her peers and is a valuable resource person due to the extended length of his/her service.

There are four evaluation criteria for this award:

1. Clinical skills (examples: board certification; CMS activity; additional relevant clinical training/skills; etc.)
2. Innovative contributions to delivering patient care (examples: developed new ways to educate patients; used home visits to improve access and quality of care; etc.)
3. Contributions to the field of clinical medicine (examples: teaching medical students/residents; patient education; membership in medical societies; publications; etc.)
4. Leadership (examples: supervise staff/team; Department Chair/Head; Clinic Director; etc.)

Applied Public Health Physician of the Year This award will recognize a physician executive who plays a key role in the successful administration or management of an office or program activity. This individual makes exceptional contributions to the accomplishments, goals, and objectives of the HHS or his/her agency and may serve while serving as a manager, administrator, or supervisor, or team leader. He/she exercises exceptional judgment in making managerial decisions and developing innovations that provide increased effectiveness in the management of programs. He/she makes choices that maximize the use of available resources and enhances the goodwill between the U.S. Government and the public.

The evaluation criteria for this award are as follows:

1. Leading Change (examples: developed/implemented an organizational vision; strategic planning; etc.)
2. Leading People (examples: ability to design strategies to foster teamwork; maximize employees' potential; etc.)
3. Business Acumen (examples: ability to acquire financial and human resources; identifies cost effective approaches to meet goals; etc.)
4. Builds Coalitions/Enhances Communication (examples: developed partnerships; participated in professional societies; published; etc.)

This award will recognize a physician who is at the rank of 0-3 or 0-4 and has made significant contributions to the Commissioned Corps and the Agency they are assigned to. This individual is early in their career with the Public Health Service yet has already demonstrated the excellence and dedication to the Commissioned Corps

There are three evaluation criteria for this award:

1. Job related skills (examples: excellence as either a clinician, researcher, mental health provider or in the field of applied public health)
2. Innovative contributions to their workplace (examples: developed new ways to educate patients; new methods related to areas of research or applied public health; etc.)
3. Officership (examples: demonstrates promotion of the Commissioned Corps through recruitment, deployment, participation in PPAC and other committees etc.)

Inactive Reserve Corps (IRC) Physician of the Year

This award will recognize a physician who is in the IRC and has demonstrated extraordinary commitment to the Commissioned Corps.

There are three evaluation criteria for this award:

1. Significant contributions to the Commissioned Corps (Examples: repeated deployments to provide back fill assistance to the USPHS Commissioned Corps during emergent situations and staff shortages).
2. Advancing the mission of the Commissioned Corps (examples: Officer has deployed in hard to fill, hazardous or remote locations, etc).
3. Promotion of the Commissioned Corps (examples: demonstrates promotion of the Commissioned Corps through recruitment events, promotes Commissioned Corps through civilian job etc.)
